CLASS DAY EXERCISES

A Large Gathering of Interested People Attend the Graduating Exercises and Listen to the Program.

The class day exercises at the opera house last Tuesday night were well attended and were interesting to all. The arrangement was somewhat different than usual, owing to a class play which was worked in with the exercises of the graduates. The change was of a nature to please all in this instance and words of appreciation were heard on every hand when the exercises came to a close.

The program of the evening opened with music by a mixed chorus which was well rendered. Then followed the essay of Alice Lewis whose topic was "There Goes an American." Miss Lewis brought out some very good points in her essay which were both interesting and instructive. She had a good clear delivery and had her subject well in hand. She gave a clear description of the average American and spoke of the zeal he displays in working his way through life, ever striving to reach the top rung of the ladder.

Louis N. Carlson, whose essay was on "The Wisconsin Indian" was next in order. His remarks showed considerable study. He touched for the most part on the tribe that inhabit the Lac du Flambeau reservation. He said that to civilize a redskin was next to impossible, that the training and education received by them at Indian schools was soon forgotten when once back in their native forests. The characteristics and the personal habits of the red men were also clearly portrayed by him.

"Is a Girl Worth Bridging Up" was the topic chosen and delivered by Miss Grace Lally, who in her manner of delivery showed that she was fully at home with her subject and possessed of many facts bearing thereon. Her essay in some parts was very humorous and drew hearty applause at intervals from the audience. She told of the great influence woman has over the opposite sex and the great services she has performed as nurse in time of war, when her tenderness is sorely needed on the battlefield and in the hospital. Home would be a sorry place to go if it were not for the gentle sex, according to the pleasant faced little essayist. Miss Lally had the entire sympathy of the audience, both men and women.

"Modern Electrical Inventions" was the subject of J. Henry Chatterton's discourse and he handled it in a way that reflected great credit and showed much study. His field of course was large, there being no lack of material. He brought out the new wrinkles that have been gotten up with the electric current as a base, and instructively spoke of the marked strides the hidden energy had taken in recent years. The Marconi system of wireless telegraphy was touched on also the radio phone or electrical storm prophet, new telephone switchboard and automatic exchange, electrograph and telautograph. Henry's voice was clear and his delivery was good.

Olive E. Macdonald's essay was on "The Advantages of a College Education," and the many good points connected with college training and instruction were very interestingly touched on by the young lady. She thought the gentle sex took more naturally to college instruction than did the men and advised her hearers to persevere and not allow anything to deter them from taking a course of higher education.

The class prophesy was given by Della M. White and Ada Haas and was something new to the majority of the audience. The curtain was raised and showed two gypsies leaning over a kettle under which a fire was burning. One of the gypsies dropped liquid from a bottle into the kettle and called upon each of the class in turn to appear. The future of each was then foretold by the gypsies and it strangely developed that one of the girls would become president of the United States. This feature of the exercises was especially interesting.

There was considerable good natured sarcasm mixed up in the remarks of Ralph Clark whose "Advice to the Juniors," if carried out according to his instruction, would revolutionize things in and about the High school. He had many good things to say for his class and as his delivery was good, he did very well. His remarks were attentively listened to and were well received.

Harriet V. Walsh answered the "Advice to the Juniors," with a "Junior Response" in which she took up the suggestions advanced, and promised to follow them along the seniors' line. Miss Walsh will graduate with the class of 1903.

"Memento" was the subject of Philip L. Roger's discourse and he handled it with the ease and grace of a diplomat. Philip had the school experience of each member of the class in a nutshell and the shortcomings (9) of several of them was laughingly brought out. He presented each of the graduates with a gift that fitted in with his descriptions. He received many compliments after his oration.

BROWN RE-NOMINATED

Tenth District Delegates in Convention Here Tuesday Unanimously Declare for W. E. Brown.

Harmony prevailed throughout the Congressional convention held in this city Tuesday afternoon. Delegates were here from every county in the Tenth district, which, under the new apportionment, now comprises the counties of Lincoln, Langlade, Iron, Ashland, Forest, Florence, Marathon, Price, Shawano, Taylor, Vilas, Wood and Oneida.

The delegates began to arrive on the early morning trains Tuesday and by ten o'clock Stevens street was well filled with a crowd, who were looking for the delegates. While the renomination of Mr. Brown was a foregone conclusion there was yet plenty of material for discussion among the representatives and knots of men wearing the Brown badge could be seen at different points along the street talking over the situation in the state. There was also a great deal of discussion relative to the nature of the resolutions which would likely be passed in the convention and the stalwart wing of the delegates were very prominent in their views regarding the sterling worth of Senator John C. Spooner. The La Follette men, however, did not favor the introduction of resolutions other than those endorsing Congressman Brown, for whom the convention was called.

GET READY FOR JULY 4

Not Much Time Left to Arrange a Program for America's Big Holiday—The Eagle Should Scream Here.

If the people of Rhinelander want to have a celebration of July 4th held here it will be well to commence action toward that end right away. It will hardly do to let the big day pass without fitting exercises and an elaborate program should be prepared that the day may be enjoyed by all. The Fourth of July stands alone and by itself as a day when the exuberance of spirits of young and old alike must be manifested. No other day will do so well, no other date will answer.

A citizens' meeting will be held at House House No. 1 Saturday night and all who are interested are requested to be present. Arrangements will be perfected then for a fitting observance of the holiday and committees will be named to look after the celebration. Attend the meeting.

Better-Noticed

Cards have been received here announcing the coming marriage of Harry N. Butler, formerly of this city, and Miss Edith Nicholson, both of Medford, Oregon. The ceremony will take place at the latter city Sunday, June 15.

Mr. Butler lived in Rhinelander for two or three years and was employed in the office of the "Saw" Planing Mill Co., when that firm was doing business here. When he left here he made one of a party of gold seekers that went up into the Cooper River country in Alaska. The trip up there was not a fruitful one so far as the gold was concerned but the party came back with a load of experience which they put into book form. The book was interesting from start to finish.

Harry is now a graduate osteopath physician and is enjoying a good practice in Medford. He is a member of the local Knights of Pythias lodge here and his friends in the order and outside unite in extending their best wishes for his future happiness.

$5.00 to Ashland and Return.

The C. & N. W. Ry. will run a popular excursion to Ashland, Wis., Sunday, June 15, 1902. The extra passenger train will leave Rhinelander at 6:20 a. m. Sunday, June 15 and reach Ashland at 10:20 a. m. The very small amount of $2.00 will be charged for the round trip. Good passenger boats at Ashland make regular trips to Washburn, Bayfield and Marquette Island; beautiful scenery can be seen along the lake and bay. Everybody go and have a good time.

K. C. Club Party.

The dancing party given by the K. C. club at the New Grand opera house last Monday evening proved to be a very enjoyable affair and was attended by nearly one hundred couples. Bruno Bros' full orchestra furnished the music. The hall was very prettily decorated for the occasion. Refreshments were served during the course of the evening by a colored waiter.

John James Dies.

The death of John James of Cassco, Mich., occurred last Sunday at that place, after several months of suffering with lung trouble. Mr. James is a man well and favorably known throughout that section of the country. At the time of his death he was postmaster and justice of the peace at Cassco. He was a brother to Mrs. A. Rheame of this city.

James Murphy was up from Monday Saturday.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION

Republicans Meet Friday and Formally Endorse Web, Brown—But Little Interest Taken in the Affair.

The Oneida County Republican convention which met Friday to select four delegates to the Congressional convention was a harmonious and agreeable affair. All the delegates were for Web, Brown's renomination and they wasted no time in discussing the business at hand. The resolutions adopted endorsed the National Administration and Web, Brown's record in Congress. They pledged Oneida county to an effort to re-elect the latter. After the convention proper, which lasted but a few moments, a meeting of the county committee was held and the question of dates for the county convention which will select delegates to the State and Assembly conventions was talked over. Acting Chairman Parker will soon call them both. So little interest was taken in the convention of Friday that some of the county precincts failed to elect delegates. The next county convention which selects delegates to the state affair will probably have a greater attendance and a full quota of delegates. The county committee filled such vacancies in its list of members as have occurred from removal of committeemen. The delegates elected to represent Oneida in the Congressional convention were F. S. Robbins, S. H. Alban, Jesse Sipes and F. S. Campbell. The latter gentleman acted as chairman of the convention.

"A Runaway Wife."

On next Monday night the Irving French Co. in "A Runaway Wife," will be the attraction at the opera house. Manager Loh promises a revelation in the line of comedy. This play has proven a laughing success for the past few seasons. All the parts are admirably sustained, as special care has been taken in procuring nothing but the best talent. A number of clever and up to date specialties are continually introduced during the action of the play, and between acts they will introduce all the latest novelties, giving a continuous performance at popular prices, 10, 20 and 50. The running time has been decided to admit 1000 free the opening night only if accompanied by an escort with one paid 50 cent ticket. Seats now on sale at the theater store.

Change of Location.

The office of the First National Bank, having moved this week from the First National Bank building on DuPont street to the store building of C. D. Brown on Brown street, where the main office will hereafter be located. The office will not be opened after the store closes in the evening and all night calls will be attended to from the public phone in the Foller House. Mr. Brown will look after the calling during the day himself. The two edifices now employed will probably be released as soon as the new location and change of location is made.

A GOOD MINSTREL SAW.

Richards & Pringle's Minstrels gave a first-class entertainment here.

The entertainment given at the grand opera house last Thursday night by the Georgia Minstrels was about the best of its kind given here in several years. The colored men played to a full house and although they were obliged to cut the program short in order to get away on the 11:15 train, enough was packed in the interim to fully demonstrate that the company was of the A. No. 1 order and capable of satisfying almost any audience almost anywhere.

The bands of the company worked in conjunction with the local musicians in the afternoon, playing the occasion of the parade of the Grand Army veterans assembled here last union. There were about thirty players lined up and the harmony was well worth listening to. The colored men marched with the old soldiers and afterward gave a concert near the Merchants State Bank corner.

The entertainment at the opera house was a big improvement over the performance given here last year by the same company. The orchestra was first-class, and under the direction of H. W. Housley did very well. Wm. Shields, the show puzzer, did work that was new to the stage, and evoked hearty applause. The solo numbers of J. A. Watts, who sang "Tell Me, Will My Dream Come True?" J. L. Sherman, who sang "Down in the Deep Let Me Sleep," and L. L. Wilson the baritone in "Way Down Yonder in the Garden" were all very well rendered and the singers were accorded generous applause. The tenor voice of Mr. Watts was sweet and powerful and dramatically aided the general effect in the choruses.

Simon Bonamour and his troupe of Arabian acrobats were decidedly the best feature that has appeared on the stage here in years. Their turns were new and were executed with marvellous ease and rapidity. The work of the midget tumblers was the best ever seen here.

Mrs. Jas. R. Howe of Milwaukee arrived in the city last Saturday to remain a few weeks, the guest of her sister, Mrs. Gus. Horn.

A London dispatch says the reports issued by the London Board of Trade in regard to railroad accidents for the year past make a remarkable showing in that not a single passenger was killed, the first time in history the English roads have made the record.

Another ship has taken just two minutes to wreck the work of ten years in its building. The inventor was hurt in the smash-up, and, strange to say, he says he will abandon his efforts to fly and go back to his old work on the railway. Airship enthusiasts are not usually so readily cured.

Almost a billion more postage stamps of all kinds have been issued since July 1 last to the post offices of the United States than were issued during the entire past fiscal year. The total issue during the present year up to this time is 4,628,341,645 stamps, against 3,174,748,520 for the entire fiscal year ending June 30 last.

With Mount Redoubt, Alaska, emitting dense smoke, cinders, and flames that rise for hundreds of feet, and rumbling noises in Mount Tokabaka, Japan, and Mount Pelée still belching, and the volcanoes of St. Vincent in action, and Vesuvius due to arrive at any moment, it may be said that there is something doing in the interior of this old sphere.

If all the land planted in corn in the United States this year were massed, the area would exceed the British Isles, Holland and Belgium combined, or four-fifths of the area of France or Germany. In spite of drought the corn crop last year fell but little short of a billion dollars in value. The favorable reports from the cornfields is good news for the country.

The last of the American soldiers who occupied Cuba have returned to this country. That is a short and simple statement of fact, but it indicates one of the most remarkable incidents in the world's history. The peaceful withdrawal of the United States from Cuban soil after placing that island, freed from a foreign yoke, in the hands of its own people, will remain one of the brightest pages in the records of time.

The one hundred and twenty-second renewal of the English Derby at Epsom Downs was of great interest to Americans. American owners were represented in the race. American horses ran, American jockeys rode, and an American jockey was the winner. There are other features of general interest, aside from the race itself. The winning owner, P. Gubbins, is Irish, and so is the winning horse, Ard Patrick.

Although the late Lord Pauncefote received a salary of $32,200 as British ambassador at Washington, and he had been in the service of the British government all his life, he left a very small estate to his family, and it is said that his unmarried daughters expect to have to find some way by which they may support themselves on their return to England. One of them contemplates becoming a trained nurse.

One of the advantages of the King business has been exemplified by King Edward, who, though he was born on November 9, has ordered that his birthday shall hereafter be celebrated on May 23, thus securing a reasonable assurance of fair weather for festivities. Unfortunately for his majesty, though he may change the date of his birthday, he cannot prevent it from coming around once a year just as it comes to the rest of us.

It turns out that Severo, the Paris aeronaut who met such a terrible death by falling 1,500 feet one day last week, had spent all of his life, as well as his time, in perfecting his airship, hoping that it would be a grand success and would make him rich. His family gets nothing but a small amount of insurance which he took out the day before the accident. The confidence these big schemers have in their ideas is childish and pitiful.

Leopoldo Batres, conservator of national monuments, has been making explorations among the ruins of the Zapotecan cities in the state of Oaxaca, Mex. Among other discoveries he found the ruins of an ancient city on Monte Alban, which shows unmistakable indications of having been submerged 2,000 years, for traces of extinct marine life were discovered. Among the ruins is an obelisk, similar to those of Egypt, which was found placed at the entrance to a tomb exactly as was the custom in Egypt.

The terms by which the war in South Africa is ended are creditable to both sides. England assumes the entire cost, pledging itself not to levy a war tax on the Transvaal and agreeing to allow the Boer combatants $12,000,000 to restore their farms. The Boers give up the arms and munitions they have in the field, but are permitted to keep rifles in their homes for protection. Prisoners will be returned at the cost of the British government, and none punished unless for violation of rules of war. The Boers must recognize the sovereignty of King Edward.

STEAMERS COLLIDE.

Whaleback Thomas Wilson Sunk at Duluth—Nine of Her Crew Are Drowned.

Duluth, Minn., June 9.—The whaleback steamer Thomas Wilson, Capt. Cameron, master, was cut almost in two by the steamer George G. Hadley, Capt. Fitzgerald, master, a half mile south of the Duluth canal Saturday and nine men went down. They were mostly men of the night crew who had not time to get out of their bunks before the vessel went to the bottom.

The Wilson was coming toward the canal and the Hadley going out, both loaded. Just before reaching the canal and when about opposite the Wilson, the Hadley was given orders by a tug to go to Superior. Immediately she steered off for the Superior entry and crashed directly into the Wilson.

The Wilson went down so quickly that it did not seem possible to save a life. One moment the two boats were plowing through the water 200 yards apart, the next the crew of the Wilson could be seen throwing off their clothing and jumping into the water. One man on the Wilson seemed to have more presence of mind than all the rest. He threw life preservers to them that jumped in the cold water without thinking and he certainly saved some lives. The crew of the Hadley also threw preservers to the men struggling in the water.

Immediately after the collision the Wilson pitched forward and went down. As she plunged, the crew that was still adrift rushed to the stern, jumping overboard as fast as they could free themselves from their clothing. The Wilson did not lie a minute after the collision. During the short time she was on top of the water she seemed to be supported entirely by the Hadley's prow, which was sticking in through her plates.

The plunge of the Wilson caused the Hadley and the latter boat swung back with a tremendous jerk. As the whaleback went beneath the water she spouted like a submarine explosion from the compression of air in her.

The Hadley would not have made the shore had it not been for the tug, and that probably means that so many more lives were saved. The life-saving crew did quick and reliable service picking up the men in the water. The Hadley had a hand run for shore and did not win the race by any too great a margin, for a moment after her low went on the bottom just south of the ship canal pier her stern began to settle and finally went down with a spouting of water similar to that which marked the sinking of the Wilson, though not so extensive that the water was thrown up on the whaleback. As the stern settled down to the bottom the bow lifted a little and the water engulfed the vessel from amidships to stern. Fully half of the way in from the scene of the accident to the point of beaching the decks of the Hadley were covered with water, and the members of the crew that were compelled to stay by her took to the upper works.

Although the weather was chilly, the streets for the entire distance from the palace to the cathedral were thickly lined with people, who waved their hands and cheered as the members of the royal family and other notabilities passed. King Edward, who wore the uniform of a field marshal, was greeted with enthusiasm, and his majesty, the prince of Wales, and the other princes were busily engaged in acknowledging salutations from the crowd. Lord Roberts, who drove with his wife and daughters, was one of the figures most conspicuously greeted with cheers. The royal personages were driven down the Mall to Trafalgar square and through the Strand and Fleet street. At Temple Bar officials of the city of London, for the first time since the jubilee of the late Queen Victoria, awaited the sovereign in state. The king's carriage was stopped when it reached the city officials, and the lord mayor of London, Sir Joseph C. Dimsdale, presented the sword of the city to his majesty, and uttered a formal welcome. The king returned the sword, smiled, bowed and simply remarked: "Thank you very much."

At the Cathedral.

The streets leading to St. Paul's cathedral were densely crowded with people, and a number of persons fainted in the crush outside the barriers which had been erected within the cathedral. King Edward and Queen Alexandra alighted at the west entrance of St. Paul's. Here they were received by the bishop of Stepney and London and conducted by them to their seats, which were under the dome of the building, and directly in front of the pulpit. The seats in the choir stalls were occupied by the members of the present cabinet, and by members of former cabinets. These gentlemen in their dark clothes, and the uniforms of ladies and white supplies were conspicuous features. Members of the house of commons were seated on opposite sides under the dome. In addition to the presence of any army and navy officials the military prowess of the empire was represented by detachments of the royal foot guards, the Horse, and Foot guards and other regiments.

The Services.

Their majesties entered the cathedral to the accompaniment of the hymn "Onward, Christian Soldiers," by the organ and choir, and the throng of worshippers rose and heartily joined in the singing. The cathedral organ was reinforced with horns and other instruments. A notable feature of the musical service was the rendition of a Te Deum, composed by the late Sir Arthur Sullivan for a thanksgiving service. Following the thanksgiving collects, and at the request of King Edward, the hymn "O God, Our Help in Ages Past" was sung to the tune of "Old Hundred." The sermon by the bishop of Stepney was short and simple and was preached on the effective text: "The Ministry of Peace." The service was concluded with the singing of the national anthem.

The members of the royal family returned from the cathedral to Buckingham palace by way of the Victoria embankment, and King Edward and the other royal personages received orations all along the route from the crowds which had, by this time, become greatly augmented.

Disarmament Proceeds.

London, June 9.—The war office has received the following message from Lord Kitchener, under Sunday's date: "The disarmament of the Boers is proceeding satisfactorily, and good spirit is displayed everywhere. Yesterday 6,242 rifles had been surrendered up to date."

Disputes received from Pretoria confirm the statements made in Lord Kitchener's communication to the war office, and say that the whole staff of the late Transvaal government, with a bodyguard of 50 men, surrendered last Saturday.

DR. HEPWORTH DEAD.

Pres. Roosevelt to Transform the White House

He Would Make of It a Palatial Residence Worthy of the Nation's Executive.

NEVER before has the white house been so full of life and animation, young voices and merry hearts, tripping feet and busy hands, bright eyes and inquisitive ears. Never before has the capacity of the home of the presidents of the United States been so tested as since the advent of President Roosevelt and his charming, interesting family. The question of remodeling and enlarging the white house has been agitated for years and occupied the attention and talents of the best architects. The time has come when discussion must give place to the hammer and the saw, the decorator and the painter, and the white house restored to its original purposes, that of the private dwelling place of the president and his family. Soon the great statesman, the busy congressman, the ob-son and others who planned with him intended it should be. Instead of five bedrooms Mrs. Roosevelt will have at her disposal nine bedrooms on the second floor, four of which will have pretty dressing-rooms attached to them. In addition there will be a magnificent guest chamber on the first floor, to be reserved for great personages who may be entertained at the white house. This bedroom, now the state dining-room, will be of great size and superbly furnished, as is fitting to an apartment in which royalities may sleep. Under ordinary circumstances Prince Henry of Prussia, on the occasion of his recent visit to Washington, would have been President Roosevelt's house guest as a matter of course. But it was simply out of the question, because there was no place to put him. In future, however, whenever a royal personage comes to see us he will get servant diplomat, the keen politician will cease to frequent the halls and rooms of the white house for the purpose of consideration of national and international affairs, and the sacred precincts of the president's home will not be invaded except upon the invitation of the president and his charming wife, and on the set days for public functions.

At the present time almost half of the capacity of the white house is taken up by the executive offices, and President Roosevelt and his large family are crowded into the west wing of the mansion, with only five bedrooms. A temporary office building is to be erected on the white house lot at an expense of $50,000 to accommodate the executive department of the government, and in this building will be transacted all the business of state, and the cabinet meetings held there. The alterations on the white house are to cost in the neighborhood of $165,000. Practically the entire inside of the building is to be torn out and the building remodeled in such a manner as to supply all the needs of the president for comfortable, commodious domestic accommodations and for social functions befitting the exalted position of the nation.

When Mrs. Benjamin Harrison was mistress of the white house she conceived the idea of magnificent and elaborate changes and additions to the mansion, and had the architects prepare plans of the same. A model of the white house, as it would be with her ideas carried out, was made at great expense, and it can now be seen on exhibition in the museum at Washington. Her idea was to erect two large annexes at the rear on the east and west ends of the mansion, and connect them by a beautiful arched colonnade with the original building. Across the rear between the two annexes was to stretch the conservatory and the enclosed area was to be made a garden spot of surpassing beauty, with its palms and fountains and brilliant hued flowers. It was the ambition of Mrs. Harrison to see her plans carried out, but such was never to be her privilege, nor that of any others who so warmly supported her in the matter.

The present plans of alterations in the white house are the ideas of President Roosevelt and his wife, and the details are now being worked out by Architect Charles F. McKim, of New York, under the president's direction. The present dimensions of the white house will not be increased, nor will there be any external alterations. The interior, originally colonial in style, will be restored in such a way as to preserve the original lines and make of it the mansion which George Washing-

Some Facts About Tammany and L. Nixon's Resignation

The expected happens. The wonder is that Lewis Nixon didn't sooner resign as a leader. These letters predicted that he would either lead or get out. He is not the man to be a figurehead or "stand for" other men's decisions. Those who wonder why Nixon accepted the place might find an answer in his personal history. He was born in Virginia. He is a democrat to his marrow bones—a democrat for principle, not for name and fame. He saw things with a statesman's, not a place-hunter's, eyes. He remembered how Tammany had fought Tilden, had fought Robinson, had fought Cleveland; how it had twice raised and twice dashed Bryan's hopes. He saw the party divided and beaten in a disastrous local election; he thought it a "man-side" task to bring the factions together. Men of his sort felt his purpose by instinct. In his brief term he brought David R. Hill and the cleaner Tammany men together with McLaughlin, the Brooklyn boss. Hill has ever been friendly. The character of Edward J. Shepley, the beaten candidate for mayor, was in his favor.

Don't believe that Nixon resigned because of a squabble over a petty wigwag office. Ex-Mayor Van Wyck, judged by the verdict in last fall's election, is certainly unfit to act as grand sachem and distribute the charity of the order. Local democracy lost 16,000 votes of men who spoiled their ballots trying to "scratch" the mayor. Now Croker and the worst element in Tammany are trying to secure Van Wyck a "re-election" by nominating him again for a $12,000 judgeship next fall, when they expect a local democratic tidal wave. This would be characteristic of Tammany to secure a fat office for a court favorite, no matter how many votes it may cost the party in the state. That was what Nixon would not "stand for." That and a discrepancy of $200,000 in the Tammany campaign fund which can be traced no further than the campaign committee's chairman, who "keeps the books." That chairman was Croker.

Croker is not a shrewd politician. His idea of leadership is to compel other men to his iron will. He is like the Bourbons. He learns nothing; forgets nothing. Nixon is treasurer of the national democracy; his tremendous energy is at the party's service. His books will balance.

Technically, Nixon's career in Tammany is a failure. Practically, it is one of the three men in New York to whom the national democracy is looking. The others are Shepley and Hill. These two are in many respects not unlike him. Both are lawyers of the highest rank; both are ecumenical speakers; both are scholars of the Tilden sort, at home in their libraries; both are ambitious, correct in their habits, called cool by "good fellows," whose goodness needs stimulus. Shepley is the younger and has had less experience in practical politics. This is an advantage. He has fewer things to forget, and fewer things about him for others to forget. He has the respect of reform elements in all parties.

Nixon is unlike both. He more resembles Roosevelt, though I have not heard the comparison made. They have the same breezy manner, the same impetuosity. Nixon is magnetic, a steam engine in trousers for energy, a man's man. People like him, when they do not run counter to him. He, like Croker, has an imperious will, though he has bent to it circumstances rather than men. His business career has been meteoric. From the navy to the shipyard, he designed the Oregon and several other great men of war now afloat. The battle of Santiago was fought with Nixon's ships. He left the navy to establish his own yard, at first with a veteran builder in partnership. It was as good as a play, three weeks later, to see the veteran sitting in his office smoking a Mediterranean pipe while the tall, powerful, pleasant-faced young fellow with the strong chin was easier for the old man to employ. Mr. Nixon has that in charge. They were building the Holland submarine boat then. Now Nixon has on the stocks four vessels of the torpedo boat type. It is rumored that he will have his plant to deeper water, where he can bid for bigger ships.

Hill, as a master of technique and shrewd strategy, is Tilden's legitimate successor. Shepley is the most skillful man in argument to whom I ever listened, though without magnetism. He appeals to the head rather than the heart. Nixon is the typical business man of the exercise sort; the kind of man that does things.

The Trade in "Kosher Meat." Twenty years ago New York readers would not have known what "kosher meat" was. Now 500 tons of it are eaten on the East side every day, when it is eaten at all—and its sale has become a burning question. Kosher meat is simply clean meat, from the Jewish ceremonial point of view. The animal must be slain in a certain way, and, of course, no clean organism—the pig, the rabbit and the toad—may be eaten. At an abattoir which caters to the orthodox Jewish trade it is the custom to hire

PREHISTORIC TENNESSEANS.

The Bones of an Ancient Race Recently Unearthed in That State by Miss Water.

After noticing the more material destruction wrought by the recent flood there is interest and fascination in studying some of its freaks which appeal more to sentiment and the student. Ancient graves were washed up at several places. The editor of the Putnam Citizen lately visited one of these. On Date Wade's farm, between his residence and Richland Mills, the flood washed up what is called an "old Indian graveyard." The burying place was located on a knoll rising gently from the creek and evidently supposed to be above high water by the prehistoric people who buried their dead there with such care. But all trace of a graveyard had long since disappeared and not even a tradition remained among the old negroes in the neighborhood.

The field was worth $50 an acre before the flood, and last year 16 acres, including the old graveyard, produced 14 bales of cotton. The land had been in cultivation long before it came into possession of Mr. Wade, and as stated, there was neither trace nor tradition of a graveyard.

But when the creek spread over the bottoms as never before, this knoll extending down into the bend of the creek suffered great destruction by the swift current flowing across it. The soil was swept away and when the flood receded the graves were exposed. We cannot tell how deep the bodies were originally buried, nor how many graves are yet uncovered, nor how many are yet unexcavated, leaving no trace. About a dozen graves were left exposed. Some of these were evidently graves of adults and some are graves of small children.

The vaults were formed somewhat similar to vaults in graves of today. Thin slabs of limestone, evidently brought from some distance, perhaps across the creek, are placed edgewise along the sides and ends. The graves are about two feet to six feet wide, indicating that the bodies were buried on the side, as they are too narrow to permit a body to lie flat on the back, as we bury; and persons who first looked into the graves say the skeletons were lying on the side. The body had been placed in the vault, which was covered by other flat rocks, and thus it was expected by the mourners and loved ones who placed it there that the body would rest undisturbed to the end of time. But when the flood exposed these carefully prepared vaults, they were soon opened, and in the absence of other souvenirs, the bones of these ancient people were carried away. A rehash was found in one grave, but the others contained nothing but decayed bones.

The Indians who occupied this country up to about 100 years ago did not usually bury their dead with such care. They simply opened a grave, wrapped a blanket about the dead body, laid it in the shallow grave and filled in the earth. Students of ethnology claim this country was inhabited by a race of idol-worshipping people, commonly called the "Mound Builders," who were driven out by the Indians. These mound builders are believed to have been superior to the Indian in many respects, but they worshipped idols, while the Indian worshipped the "Great Spirit."

The graves recently washed up on the Wade farm may have some connection with a discovery made about 20 years ago in the bluff on the opposite side of the creek. Dave Jannan, who then lived at the Mrs. Jannan place, went to some dogs that had chased a rabbit into the rocks on the bluff. Among the rubbish he found two small clay figures, one the form of a man, the other a woman. They were in sitting posture, perhaps four or five inches high.

Smells of Cities. Sir Philip Burne Jones insists that each city has its own peculiar odor, that a stranger can smell a city. "The great blended odor of the entire city." There is truth in his remarks. When a stranger enters Munich there is a smell as of many breweries; a peculiar, sweetish, yet pungent odor of malt, not at all unpleasant to a beer drinker. After a day or two the smell is not remarked, but after the stranger leaves the city the smell is distinct in his memory; it exerts a spell; it urges him to drop his work, to take the next steamship. We have not been in Munich for 17 years, but that sweet smell haunts us still. Paris has a peculiarly individual odor; so has London, so has Berlin, so has Dresden. Boston, no doubt, has its own smell, which is highly respectable, but rather starchy, with a suspicion of old family cock-roaches.—Detroit Free Press.

Dress Reform. Once upon a time a certain woman, who had been much pestered by a dress reformer, was shot at by a friended snigger, and was saved from an untimely death by her corset, which deflected the bullet.

The Promoters. "Let us make the capital stock $1,000,000,000," said the first promoter.

"All right," said the second, who was preparing the prospectus on the type-writer.

"Will it be hard to increase that capital?" asked the first.

"No, indeed. All I have to do is to hit this 0 key a few more times."—Baltimore American.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN OF THE WHITE HOUSE. Showing Proposed Changes. The Shaded Portion is the Only Part That Has Been the President's Own Habitation.

hibition in the museum at Washington. Her idea was to erect two large annexes at the rear on the east and west ends of the mansion, and connect them by a beautiful arched colonnade with the original building. Across the rear between the two annexes was to stretch the conservatory and the enclosed area was to be made a garden spot of surpassing beauty, with its palms and fountains and brilliant hued flowers. It was the ambition of Mrs. Harrison to see her plans carried out, but such was never to be her privilege, nor that of any others who so warmly supported her in the matter.

The present plans of alterations in the white house are the ideas of President Roosevelt and his wife, and the details are now being worked out by Architect Charles F. McKim, of New York, under the president's direction. The present dimensions of the white house will not be increased, nor will there be any external alterations. The interior, originally colonial in style, will be restored in such a way as to preserve the original lines and make of it the mansion which George Washing-

The south portico, which adds so much to the beauty of the structure, was built in 1823, and the east room was not finished and made habitable until 1826, having been used up to that time as a laundry. The front portico of Ionic pillars was added in 1827. The original cost of the building was about a quarter of a million dollars, and up to date nearly $2,000,000 altogether have been spent on it. The sandstone walls were first painted white in 1817 to conceal the smoke marks of the British torches during their invasion in 1814. Hence it obtained the name of the white house and President Roosevelt by his official recognition of the name to the ignoring of the term executive mansion has for all time definitely fixed this name as the title of the home of the presidents of the United States. While the president and his family are away during the summer the workmen will be set to work and the historic structure will echo with the sound of the artisans' tools. The work will be rushed and the transformed white house made ready for the return of the occupants in the fall.

MEAT ONCE A DAY.

Theory That Average Family's Food Is Too Heavy For Health.

Our mistakes in eating begin with our breakfast. In many families, perhaps in most, this meal commences with fruit and cereal, goes on to eggs and potatoes, hot breads and coffee and concludes with puddings and stews. At noon, when a man's stomach is only beginning to rest from all this, he has a steak, more potatoes, bread and butter, coffee and pie, while at home his wife has a slice of cold meat, a cup of tea and a piece of cake. At night the two sit down to dinner, with meat, potatoes and bread and butter as the staples of the meal.

Now, no one but a wood-chopper or a hunter can possibly eat meat—alone all red meat, such as beef and mutton—three times a day without inviting trouble to come and take up its dwelling in his system. Nor can he eat white bread, potatoes and pastry day after day without inviting dyspepsia. One has only to let a doctor trace back these diseases to their source to be quite certain on these points.

But if we decide to give up these things, determine to have meat and potatoes only once a day and red meat only once a week; if we take pastry, the starchy vegetables, the white bread and heavy stews, what have we left for the family meals? "Nothing," the distracted housewife will exclaim despairingly at first thought, but really the matter is not as difficult as it seems.

A PLEASING FRENCH TRAIT.

Love Between Brothers a Strangely Marked Characteristic.

One of the ways in which the close union of French family life shows itself is the frequent affection of brothers for each other. There is an intimacy between them in good and evil fortune which one does not find in other countries. A brother who takes a high position by his talents loses no opportunity to forward the interests of one of lesser ability or of no ability. He never treats the latter as a drag on him, and perhaps secretly feels that he is one. Married brothers often like to live in the same house, on different floors, and to hire summer villas in close proximity.

Most of the famous Frenchmen whom I knew had each a brother to whom he was devoted. Louis and Charles Blanc, though so dissimilar in appearance, tastes, disposition, and married to women who disliked each other, were, morally speaking, Siamese twins until death severed the bond. The same might be said of the Garniers, Pares, of Jules Favre and his brother Leon, of Ernest and Arthur Daudet, of Pouch, the sculptor, and his brother the deputy. Paul and Hippolyte Flourens, the painters, were known to their student days as the Siamese twins. It did not infrequently happen that brothers went into literary partnership. Instances that occur to me are the Goncourts, the Bernays, the Marguerites. It would be impossible to discern the work of one of any of these brothers from that of another. What is very curious, each brother, as in the case of Charles and Louis Blanc, Ernest and Arthur Daudet, Jules and Leon Favre, differed strikingly in every characteristic from the other. The dissimilarity of the Marguerites is so great that one wonders how brothers could be so unlike. Alphonse Daudet was not a bit like his brother Ernest, an accomplished novelist also.—London News.

TWO ODD FISHES.

The Changeable Pink Bird and the Rainbow Hired Parrot Fish.

The clear, limpid waters that surround Bermuda and the West Indies are above coral reefs covered with plants and animals, many of which are brilliant in color as a rainbow. They look like glistening bits of fairyland, and as you eye waters from one wonder to another you catch yourself striving to just look around some corner into a strange nook, half hoping to see a boy of merman and mermaids sporting and playing within the crannies. Here is a patch of pale green sea lettuce, there a group of great purple sea fans, yonder some golden corals standing out like a shelf or branching like a tree, while among them all swim lovely fishes that take the place of the fairies that should dwell in this magic land and fascinate you by their gorgeous colors and their graceful, wavy motions.

There is a great green "parrot fish," as brilliant in color as his namesake the bird, showing himself boldly and swimming along slowly, secure from any assault. His scales are green as the fresh grass of springtime, and each one is bordered by a pale blue line. His fins are pink, and the end of the tail is tended with nearly every color of the rainbow. He is slow, but his shyness serves him a good purpose. His flesh is bitter and poisonous to man and probably so to other fishes as well, and they let him alone, for they can recognize him afar off, thanks to his ready dress.

Upright and the parrot, lying on the bottom, is a "pink bird." You notice him, and as the parrot passes over him he suddenly changes to bright scarlet and as quickly resumes his former faint color. Had the parrot been looking for his dinner and thought the bird would make a good first course this sudden change of color might have scared him off, just as the sudden bristling of a cat makes a dog change his mind. When the bird is disturbed at night, he gives out flashes of light to startle the intruder and send him away in a fright.—Professor C. I. Bristol in St. Nicholas.

THE HOLY CITY.

Jerusalem Still Remains a Great Fortress of Middle Ages.

Jerusalem is literally "built upon its own heap." Below the houses, courts and paved streets of the present unbroken city are the distinguishable remains of eight other cities—those of Solomon, Nebuchadnezzar, Herod, Hadrian, Constantine, Omar, Godefroy, Saladin, and Sultan—writes Walter Williams from the Holy City to his paper in Columbia, Mo.

Jerusalem has been besieged twenty-seven times, a record of vicissitude unparalleled in the history of the world's cities. It has been burned, sacked, razed to the ground, its inhabitants of every faith put to the sword, all the walls utterly by its own prophets against it have come to pass, yet Jerusalem still remains a great fortress of the middle ages. Seen from the Mount of Olives, its massive gray walls, its flat roofed houses, its mosques and churches with their conspicuous towers and minarets, present a marvelous picture, beautiful, sublime, unending, from the picture gallery of the mind.

The city itself has narrow, dirty streets. The water supply for its 70,000 people comes in a four inch pipe. The open courts are few and small, and the houses are bunched together with no regard for room or cleanliness. Some houses are underground and others on top of the high inclosing walls. The people are fanatical, ignorant, selfish. There is much to detract from the ideal city, but despite all this and more Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives is the same in its essential details, the same in the framework of its setting, the same in its fascinating suggestion, as the Jerusalem of which David sang and over which Jesus wept.

CURED OF PELVIC CATARRH

She Suffered for Years and Felt Her Case Was Hopeless—Cured by Peruna.

Mrs. Judge McAllister writes from 1317 West 3rd St., Minneapolis, Minn., as follows:

"I suffered for years with a pain in the small of my back and right side. It interfered often with my domestic and social duties and I never supposed that I would be cured, as the doctor's medicine did not seem to help me any. Fortunately a member of our Order advised me to try Peruna and gave it such high praise that I decided to try it. Although I started in with little faith, I felt so much better in a week that I felt encouraged.

"I took it faithfully for seven weeks and am happy indeed to be able to say that I am entirely cured. Words fail to express my gratitude. Perfect health once more is the best thing I could wish for, and thanks to Peruna I am now a well woman."

Corey departed yesterday morning for Rhinelander, where he goes as representative of the Wausau Gun Club at the annual meeting of the Wisconsin State League of gun clubs, which holds a business session there on Thursday, concluding Friday and Saturday with exhibitions of marksmanship. About thirty or forty clubs will compete for prizes, and the man making the highest score will have the honor of being state champion. It is the hope of Corey's friends that he will bring home with him, at least something to show that he was in the game.—Wausau Pilot.

A Successful Reunion.

The reunion of the 32nd Wis. Vet. Vol. Inf. held here last week came to close Thursday evening when the last gathering was held in the Armory. In the afternoon an elegant banquet was served in the building to the old soldiers, Co. L, and a number of citizens. The menu consisted of nearly all the good things known to the culinary art and was served in a most tasteful manner. To A. Klucaid, who had the management of the banquet, is due a good share of the credit for making it a success. By noon the following day most of the visitors had departed. The next reunion will be held at Marinette. The veterans were all loud in their praises of the hospitality shown them by our people during their stay here, many saying that it was the best time that they had enjoyed for many a year.
